

Action on Human Rights

There is no excuse for continued global inequality and injustice.

We oppose illegal occupation and oppression, and support legal international action through the International Criminal Court against governments of any countries that commit human rights abuses.

We want to see the full publication of the Chilcot Inquiry so that the public can see the unvarnished truth of how and why the UK participated in the illegal invasion of Iraq. Plaid Cymru opposed this illegal war at the time, with Plaid Cymru MP Adam Price attempting to impeach Tony Blair for his war crimes.

We support the right of peoples across the world to self-determination and to make the decision for themselves to become an independent self-governing nation. Any voting process must comply with international standards.

We support the Human Rights Act and will work with international organisations to ensure that LGBT rights are understood and implemented on a global scale.

The importance of International Aid

Failure to assist the developing world will only fuel resentment, violence and division.

Countries must be helped to develop their own path out of poverty and we support legislation to underpin the 0.7% Gross National Product that should be provided in international aid. This funding must be stringently monitored by independent organizations to avoid misuse.

We believe that goals must be set to reduce inequality at home and abroad. Following the Millennium Development Goals, strong post-2015 goals must be set, which also recognise of the impacts of climate change upon poverty and the importance of sanitation. These goals must be respected by international organisations, including those outside the development sector, and business must play a role in meeting these goals.

Wales will provide humanitarian aid to the best of our ability whenever required and accept displaced persons and refugees where possible and appropriate.

International agreements on arm sales must be strengthened to restrict access to deadly weapons, particularly those intended for civil repression, and we want arms trade promotions with despotic countries ended.

We will ensure international co-operation to prevent modern slavery, female genital mutilation (FGM), cyber-crime and other serious cross-national crimes.
